Methodology

Countries are given points for each of the following elements:

- They are signatories of the UN Declaration of LGBT rights (0.5 point);
- They recognize same-sex sexual relations (1 point);
- They recognize same-sex civil unions (1 point);
- They recognize same-sex marriage (1 point);
- They have laws preventing some (0.5 point) or all (1 point) discrimination;
- They have laws that prevent discrimination on gender identity or expression (0.5 point) and/or they recognize legal gender changes without sterilization (1 point).

The highest total of points is 7.5, of which 40 countries and sovereign entities have achieved. Some countries that have achieved high numbers were not included because of their other policies which endangers individuals, such as Israel.
